Mass tourism: образец ответа

Hello, Sveta! I have found two pictures which, to my mind, can illustrate our project “Mass tourism”. I would like to discuss them with you.

The first photo shows a lady who is travelling somewhere in the wild; we can see hilly mountains in the background. She has a professional camera, and she is taking a photo of some plants, I suppose, rare species. In the second photo we can see a group of tourists on a double-decker. They are on a sightseeing tour in some city, listening to the guide and taking pictures of the buildings around them.

These photos have a difference that is really important for our project. In Photo 1 the lady is travelling solo, while in the second photo there is a group of people. Another difference worth mentioning is that the lady has chosen a natural destination off the beaten track, whereas the people in Photo 2 are on a city tour, which is usually organised for groups.

Speaking about the advantages, when you travel alone, you have a chance to relax and recharge. On the other hand, in a group you feel safer and can always get advice from more experienced travellers. But both ways of travelling have disadvantages as well. If you are alone in an unknown place, you can get lost. In a group you can be disturbed by other people when you listen to the guide.

As for me, I would like to travel in a group with my friends. I am a sociable person, and I like to share my emotions with someone.

So, that is all I wanted to tell you about the photos for our project. Let me know what you think about them.
